Dear Friends,
Our HISTORY is Our Strength is the theme for 2011. During these difficult times, it seems like a fitting theme for our nation to consider and embrace.

This year, rather than highlighting national figures, we are encouraging individuals to discover stories about the women in their own families and communities. Knowing the challenges these women faced, grappled with, and overcame can be an enormous source of strength to all of us.

Thanks for your support,

The NWHP Champions Women's History

The NWHP mission is to recognize, honor, and celebrate women's history.

Founded in Santa Rosa, California in 1980, the NWHP enjoys a nationwide presence as the number one resource for information, materials, and resources about the unfolding roles of women in American history. Visit our website www.nwhp.org.

Join the National Women's History Project in October 2011 on a fascinating and fun-filled Women's Rights Historic Sites Bus Tour

The bus tour will follow the women's rights trail in upstate New York. Sites will include the Susan B. Anthony House in Rochester, Harriet Tubman House in Auburn, Matilda Jocelyn Gage House in Fayetteville and Elizabeth Cady Stanton's House, the National Women's Hall of Fame, and the Women's Rights National Historical Park in Seneca Falls. Look for details on our website in March 2011.

Suffrage Banner Presented to California

"Day of Jubilation" Re-enactment

On November 8, 2010 in culmination of a year-long of activities honoring the 100th anniversary of Washington women winning vote, the "Suffrage Banner" was ceremoniously passed to women of California. This historic moment was a re-enactment of the same ceremony that had been held in November 8, 1910. The "Day of Jubilation" started with a short march to the capitol at Olympia, with so many in period costumes, enjoying exhibitions, speeches, and musical entertainment. Washington became the fifth state to adopt women's suffrage, 10 years before the U.S. constitutional amendment was ratified.

California women won the right to vote on October 10, 1910. Celebrations honoring the California Women's Suffrage Centennial will take place throughout all of 2011.

Women's History Month Celebrated at the U.S. Capitol

Then-Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi greeted Dartmouth College students Erika Murillo and Jennifer Robinson at the Women's History Month Commemoration.

The NWHP took part in the observance of Women's History Month in the U.S. Capitol in March, 2010. Then-Speaker of the House, Nancy Pelosi, hosted a reception in honor of Secretary of State Hillary Clinton. Both women praised the work of the NWHP. Clinton exclaimed, "But there are so many millions throughout our history and millions more in the world today whose accomplishments are unheralded. Just look at how few women we have here in Statuary Hall or throughout the Capitol. Slowly but surely, we are writing women back into history, as the National Women's History Project says."

Do It Yourself Women's History

Discovering Women's History in Your Community

By Jeanne Robinson

Frances McGaughey Martin and Sarah Latimer Finley led the fight for women's right to vote in Sonoma County, California. Martin was president of the Political Equality Association of Sonoma County and Finley served as press chairman. In the fall of 1911 they put on a rally in support of the state woman suffrage amendment. Their hard work paid off - on October 10, 1911, California women won the right to vote.

I discovered these women suffragists by researching at my local public library. The first place I looked was a well-known book about the county's largest city written by local historians. The pages about women's suffrage included the names of Martin and Finley.

That led me to the library's special room devoted to local history and genealogy. A lot of the county's old newspapers and books about local history have been indexed and are searchable on the library's computers.

"Suffragists" and "women voting" were the first words I typed into the library's search engine. It returned about 10 entries. I pulled each book off the shelf and read what it had to say about women's history. I found a couple of references to Martin and Finley and decided to return to the database and search for each woman's name. That search returned several more entries. As I read the books, a picture of each woman began to emerge.

Frances McGaughey Martin, who went by Fannie, rose to prominence in the 1880's when she became the first woman elected to public office in Sonoma County. She served as the County Superintendent of Schools, the only elected office open to women, from 1886 to 1892. After that, Martin "read" the law and was admitted to the California Bar on December 24, 1895, becoming the second female lawyer in the county. Sarah Latimer Finley was a writer and civic leader. She wrote articles and essays for newspapers, magazines, and club papers. Throughout her almost 90 years she advocated for social and civic welfare.

My research led me to other women, too. I discovered the first woman doctor, the first librarian, and the first pharmacist in my county. I read about a female tennis champion, two sister nurses who served in WWI, and an Air Force pilot. I learned about a famous native-American basket weaver and a Mexican-American homesteader who received the first land grant in the county and is called "the Mother of Santa Rosa." I discovered this rich women's history because I decided to find out who were the suffragists in my local community.

Jennie Colvin was the first woman to register to vote in Sonoma County. On January 2, 1912 she entered her name in the voter records. Jennie Colvin and her husband ran the Alpha boarding house on B Street in Santa Rosa

How to Start a Women's Heritage Trail

From the Boston Women's Heritage Trail

<http://bwht.org/tours/charlestown>

Charlestown Walk

"Walk Her Way" is the third in a series of walks which were developed under the auspices of the Boston Women's Heritage Trail by teachers and students in the Boston Public Schools. This walk was developed by fifth graders in Maria D'Itria's class at the Harvard/Kent School in Charlestown. The students put out a call in the school and neighborhood for nominations of important women and researched local women in history. They walked through the neighborhood, conducted interviews, and collected photographs. They chose a name for the walk and designed the logo. The students even marched on Bunker Hill Monument to protest the omission of Sarah Josepha Hale's name from the historical timeline display. Leaving a fabric rose at each stop, the students conducted a tour for first and second graders who had designed their own walk in Roxbury. There are 14 stops on the trail, from houses to plaques, from the courthouse to the hospital. Here is the first stop:

CT1: City Square Park

Charlestown can be called the "Mother of Boston," since it was settled in 1629, one year before Boston. When the English settlers arrived, the land was inhabited by Pawtuckets and ruled by a queen, the Squaw Sachem (d. 1667). Who reserved her right to use her old fishing places and hunting grounds until her death.

Student Designed Trails

Mother Goose Plaque

Elizabeth Foster, born in Charlestown in 1655, married Isaac Vergoose. They raised 16 to 20 children, some from his first marriage. Her son-in-law, Thomas Fleet, published the little songs she sang to her children and grandchildren. They became known as "Mother Goose Rhymes."

Charlestown Courthouse

The Charlestown District Courthouse is located near the site of the first judicial court in Massachusetts, founded in 1630. Judge Mary Brennan presided here from 1980-1989.

How to start YOUR search:

1. Check out your public library. There may be a special section devoted to "local history." Search the card catalog for topics such as "women," "women's suffrage," "women voting," "suffragists," "suffragettes," or the name of your town.

2. Review books about your town. Ask the reference librarian if you cannot find one in the card catalog. Look in the book's index for listings such as "women's suffrage" and "19th Amendment."

3. Visit your local museums. Museums are a rich source of historical material. Check out their websites for teacher resources which may feature women in history. Museums may also have Outreach Programs that brings presentations to classrooms.

4. Contact your local historical society. Cities and counties usually have historical societies. These organizations may have websites and newsletters with information and links to other historical sites. They may also publish books about the local history. And, they may feature a walking tour of your city or of an old cemetery.

5. Go to the Visitor's Center. Cities usually have a Visitor's Center with brochures about historic sites or walking tours in your area.

Teaching WOMEN'S HISTORY in the Classroom

ACTIVITIES FOR ELEMENTARY STUDENTS

1. Create a Women's Hall of Fame: Have students look through newspapers and magazines to find captioned photos about the accomplishments and activities of women today. Focus on your own community or include the entire country. Collect the photos for several weeks. Use a collage or a more structured approach to mount the pictures for a special bulletin board display. Have students write short biographies about each woman. Hold a ceremony to induct the women into your Women's Hall of Fame.

2. Celebrate Our Foremothers: Observe the birthdays of our nation's foremothers throughout the year as you do for our forefathers. Select one woman each month (use the calendar on our website, www.nwhp.org). Post each woman's photo and a biography on your classroom bulletin board. Other celebration ideas include creating a story, skit, or a film about some of the women who were important in the history of our country.

3. Stage a Parade: Hold a miniature parade celebrating women's history with shoebox floats. Each student or class can create the floats. Have a student committee design, make and present award ribbons to all the participants. Use another committee to announce each float during the parade. Possible themes showcasing women's history are: women winning the right to vote, American Indian and colonial women's work providing for their families, women during World War II, women in sports, and women in the arts.

4. Create a Quilt: Read a story to the class about a significant woman in history. Using construction paper, have each student design a quilt square representing some important event or accomplishment in her life. Piece together the squares, gluing them onto a solid color background, to make a class quilt telling the story of the woman's life. Invite other classes to do similar projects, and hang them all in the cafeteria or library as part of your National Women's History Month celebration in March.

ACTIVITIES FOR SECONDARY STUDENTS

1. Create News Reports: Have students write or produce news releases for radio or television about women in history. Students can develop an audio or video program. Have them report on a specific event in which the women were the major players. Act like the event has just happened. Include all of the important details: who, what, when, where, why, plus a snappy title and lead-in.

2. Organize a Walking Tour: Identify historic sites related to women in your local area. Research the sites and produce a brochure using photographs, newspaper clippings, and other memorabilia. Create a map of the local area and specify each site. Consider producing an audio tour to accompany the written

3. Produce Visual Oral Family Histories: Brainstorm a list of questions students would like to ask an aunt, mother, or significant woman in their lives, about her life. Guide the students toward questions related to the impact of historic events on the woman's life, family expectations for females and males, and attitudes about women's jobs. Discuss oral history interviewing strategies to avoid "yes/no" answers. Have the students obtain a photo of the woman when she was the age of the students, and also a photo of each student. Write up the entire interview or just a summary. Display the two photos and the interview together in the library or other area in the school.

4. Write a Textbook Review: Carefully examine the history textbooks used in your school, compiling a list of each woman either mentioned in the text or illustrated by a photo or drawing. How many women are mentioned? Why were these particular women included? Are women of different ethnicities portrayed? Contrast the findings with the textbook's presentations of men. Send a report of these findings to the publisher. Recommend specific women and information for future editions, and request a response.

Websites Filled with Teaching Resources and Ideas

The website of Penny Colman, an award winning author, is chockfull of material for teaching women's history. In the Readers' Resource section, you will find Questions and Answers, Readers' Guides, and Classroom Connections. For the Classroom, there are activities across the curriculum for several of her engaging books, including Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony: A Friendship that Changed History, which will be published (May 2011)

Detailed instructions and samples of students' work are posted for "How a Teacher Used Rosie the Riveter: Women Working on the Home Front in World War II to Teach Poetry and Women's History."

Other sections include photographs, podcasts, videos, and Colman's women's history blog posts. <http://www.pennycolman.com/>

Our HISTORY is Our Strength

The stories of women's achievements are integral to the fabric of our history. Learning about women's tenacity, courage, and creativity throughout the centuries is a tremendous source of strength.

Until relatively recently, this sphere of women's history was overlooked and undervalued. Women's achievements were often distorted, disdained, and denied.

But, knowing women's stories provides essential role models for everyone. And role models are genuinely needed to face the extraordinary changes and unrelenting challenges of the 21st century.

Women's History is Everywhere

When we began our work in 1980, we realized that women's accomplishments were absent from most school curriculums. To address this problem, we pioneered National Women's History Week/Month as a focal celebration to encourage teachers to expand their lessons to include women's history. To our joyful amazement, National Women's History Month and Women's Equality Day have furthered an extraordinary expansion of women's history events. In addition to school programs, each year there are hundreds of thousands of luncheons, events, and other celebrations held by organizations, corporations, and the federal government including military installations throughout the world. Each program focuses on recognizing the achievements of one or many women. These honorees are women from communities or organizations; others are from the national narrative; and all are women who have changed America.

Matilda Joslyn Gage Center Lets You Write on the Walls!

The Gage Center is not just one more dusty house museum. Visitors are invited to dialogue about everything from treaty rights and church-state separation to human trafficking and a woman's right to control her own body at the Matilda Joslyn Gage Center in Fayetteville, New York. Guests can touch the displays, take photographs, eat and drink, and most importantly WRITE ON OUR WALLS. We have just two rules: 1. Check your dogma at the door, and 2. Think for yourself. Gage lived in this house from 1854-1898. She was a suffragist who led the National Woman Suffrage Association with Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony. # National Women's Hall of Fame Plans Expansion

The women and men of Seneca Falls, New York created the National Women's Hall of Fame in 1969. They believed that the contributions of American women deserved a permanent home in the small village where the fight for women's rights began. In 1979, after a major fundraising drive, the Hall purchased an historic bank building in the heart of the Seneca Falls Historic District. Today the Hall is home to exhibits, artifacts of historical interest, and a research library.

As the nation's oldest membership organization dedicated to celebrating the achievements of great American women, the National Women's Hall of Fame remains true to its mission: Showcasing great women...Inspiring all!

The Hall pays tribute to some of the greatest women in the history of this country. This esteemed group grows with each Induction Ceremony and as women continue to influence and shape the arts, athletics, business, education, government, humanities, philanthropy and science. We are achieving our mission in a variety of ways while preserving our historical roots through the induction of great women into the Hall of Fame. Our comprehensive programming and multiple organizational venues give potential members and supporters several ways to become engaged with the Hall and the Inductees, both now and in the future.

We look forward to celebrating the Hall's 50th anniversary in 2019 with an enlarged concept of the National Women's Hall of Fame. We plan to become a multifaceted Center for Great Women and will expand into the historic Seneca Knitting Mill. Now fully owned by the Hall, the Seneca Knitting Mill complex is centered on three waterfront acres along the Seneca-Cayuga Canal. The transformed Mill complex will provide spacious room for educational programs, special events, and the Hall's collection of significant memorabilia from many great American women.

The National Women's Hall of Fame - Center for Great Women will inspire and guide future generations to their own greatness. Please visit our website for more information: <http://www.greatwomen.org/>

How to start a Women's Hall of Fame

Who were some of the women whose contributions added significantly to the quality of life in your city, county, or state? You can include women who are living. Start your research at your local library, newspaper, and/or historical society. When you have constructed a list of women, prepare a short, fact-filled biography about each one. Prepare a letter to your local or state historical society, arguing persuasively for the establishment of a Women's Hall of Fame. Attach the list and biographies you have prepared. Good luck!!

Of the 100 statues displayed in the U.S. Capitol, only nine represent women. In 1864, Congress created National Statuary Hall and invited all the states to honor two prominent citizens with a statue. The first statue was installed in 1870. By 1933, the Hall was so crowded that Congress allowed the state statues to be displayed throughout the Capitol Building. By 1971, all 50 states were represented with at least one statue.

100th Anniversary of INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY

100th Anniversary 1911 – 2011
 Join a Celebration on March 8th By Susan Blair

On March 8, 1857, women from the garment and textile industry in New York staged a demonstration protesting low wages and the 12 hour workday with increased workloads. They called for improved conditions and equal pay for all working women. Their march was dispersed by the police. Some women were arrested and others trampled in the confusion.

Three years later, in March of 1860, these women formed their own union and called again for their demands to be met. On March 8, 1908, thousands of women from the garment trade industry demonstrated once more in New York, adding demands for legislation regulating child labor and the right for women to vote.

In 1910, the German labor leader Clara Zetkin proposed that March 8th be proclaimed International Women's Day (IWD) in memory of the earlier struggles of women for better lives. Over the next 60 years, March 8th was celebrated mostly in European countries. By 1967, groups in the United States began to celebrate the event and by 1970, owing to the growing women's liberation movement, events were planned in most major cities.

The United Nations designated 1975 as International Women's Year. Women's organizations and governments around the world have observed IWD annually on March 8th. They hold large-scale events that honor women's advancements, while calling attention to the continued vigilance and action required to ensure equality is gained and maintained in all aspects of life.

In 1980 International Women's Day was used as the focus for the first National Women's History Week, which in 1987 became National Women's History Month.

International Women's Day Facts

1908 - March 8
 Women workers in the needle trades march through NYC's Lower East Side to protest child labor, sweatshop working conditions, and to demand votes for women.

1909 - September
 Uprising of the 20,000 begins, a successful 6-month general strike by shirtwaist workers, led by Clara Lemlich and supported by the National Women's Trade Union League of America (NWTUL). Factory owners settle the strike in February 1910, offering improved wages, working conditions, and hours.

1911 - March 11
 More than one million attend first International Women's Day (IWD) rallies campaigning for women's right to work, vote, hold office in Germany, Austria, Denmark and Switzerland.

1911 - March 25
 Triangle Shirtwaist Factory Fire in New York City takes the lives of 146 workers, most of them young immigrant women. Outrage leads to passage of important factory safety legislation in the US.

1912 - March 14
 10,000 celebrate the victorious 3-month "bread and roses" strike against American Woolen Company in Lawrence, MA. Many lives lost in this violently-opposed strike of immigrant workers.

1913 - March 8
 On eve of WWI, women across Europe hold peace rallies. IWD thereafter celebrated on March 8.

1915 - April
 1300 women from Europe and North America, from countries at war against each other and neutral ones, come together in a Congress of Women to protest the killing and destruction of the war then raging in Europe. Jane Addams selected President of the Congress and of the International Women's Committee (later Women's International League of Peace and Freedom WILPF). Collectively, women issue 20 resolutions to end the conflict and lay the foundation for a permanent peace.

1975
 International Women's Year declared by the United Nations.

1980 March
 Using March 8th IWD as the focal date, US Congress declares the First Women's History Week and later in 1987, declared the entire month of March as National Women's History Month.

HALF THE SKY

Half the Sky lays out an agenda for the world's women and three major abuses: sex trafficking and forced prostitution; gender-based violence including honor killings and mass rape; maternal mortality, which needlessly claims one woman a minute. This kind of oppression feels transcendent – and so does the opportunity. Outsiders can truly make a difference.

Why Did Syracuse Cultural Workers (SCW) Publish An International Women's Day Poster (IWD)?

By Dik Cool, SCW Publisher

Since the founding of Syracuse Cultural Workers (SCW) in 1982 one of the defining principles of the business has been feminism and support in the USA and internationally for women's rights in all its forms.. In an era when most companies have abandoned US workers for offshore printing, SCW has defied this anti-union practice and been successful. SCW has printed its products with union labor. The celebration and development of people's history is another cornerstone of SCW's work that bears directly on our decision to honor International Women's Day by publishing an historic poster.

IWD is widely celebrated in Europe, and is a national holiday in thirty countries. In these national celebrations and in the thousands of local celebrations that will take place in 2011, it is critically important to remember IWD's radical roots, the accomplishments of feminists in the last 100 years, and the conditions of war and exploitation that women around the world face in 2011 and beyond.
